Who Forgot Their Underpants? – A Silly Summer of Storywriting (grades 2-3)

Did you know that the author of the incredibly hilarious Captain Underpants series published his first book when he was just a kid? This summer, come celebrate the great Dav Pilkey as we look at some of his funniest stories ever. And then, and this is the best part, we're going to write our own stories and publish our own books. Spend a week at Scribble Press learning that rhyme and laughter and yes, sometimes even bad breath, can make great writers!

June 7-11 9am-12pm, August 16-20 9am-12pm

Downtime Can Be Dangerous – A Creative Writing Class (grades 4-6)

Who hasn't dreamed about going away for the summer on an extraordinary quest? Decipher mysterious codes, tackle the strange and embrace the unusual, travel to places unknown. Modeling some of our favorite summer tales, we're going to spend the week writing our own adventure of adventures. Come to Scribble to imagine and create the magic and mystery...and danger that only a week without school can bring!

June 7-11 1pm-4pm, August 16-20 1pm-4pm

Kapow! A Comic Book Adventure (Level 1 – grades 2-3; Level 2 – grades 4-6)

Remember. Heroes can be unusually, well..., usual. When in disguise, they can be family pets, newspaper reporters, or indeed, even lunch ladies! Let's learn what makes a great comic book hero and have fun creating our very own comic books. Wow your readers with silly humor or daring bravery! It's up to you. In one week, you'll map out your story, create fantastic comic illustrations, and finish with a completed book to show your friends. Feel like a hero when you autograph your own book at our "release" party.

About The Director of Writing Programs

Jennifer Sarja has been teaching writing and critical thinking for fifteen years. A graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy, Jennifer began her formal writing education at Middlebury College and went on to earn a joint degree in writing and history at New York University's Tisch School of the Arts. In 1996, Jennifer completed her Master's Degree in Writing at NYU and moved to Los Angeles where her adaptation of Robert Cormier's The Bumblebee Flies Anyway was produced, starring Elijah Wood, Rachel Leigh Cook, and Janeane Garafalo. While residing in Los Angeles, Jennifer developed teaching programs which have carried many students to great success. In 2005 she founded the creative writing center Youthinkwell in Pasadena, which she ran for five years. Jennifer is also the author of When Watute Wants Some Water and the editor of Youthinkwell's collection How to Cook With a Pencil. Jennifer has created Scribble Press' writing curricula and will be teaching at the New York City location.
